

LearnEnglish Teens

Grammar videos: Have got

Remember to watch the video first! Then read the conversation between Sophie and Niwat, a student she met when she went to Bangkok. Sophie's helping Niwat prepare for an English exam.

Have got (have/has + got) is used to talk mainly about possessions or personal attributes.

Give me some examples, please.

Niwat

Certainly, here you are:

I've got a new computer.

They haven't got any red chilli peppers.

She's got long, brown hair.

He hasn't got many friends.

sopnie

So the negative is have/has + not + got?

Yes, but don't forget the contraction.

Daisy hasn't got her books yet. You haven't got 50 p, have you?

Is has got only used for things?

I've got swimming practice at seven.

Fred's got a terrible cold.

You can use have got for abstract things too.

I've got an idea for the weekend.

I've got all the inspiration I need ... up here!

Can I use have got in the past? For example: I had got a racing bicycle when I was younger.

© The British Council, 2012 The United Kingdom's international organisation for educational opportunities and cultural relations. We are registered in England as a charity.

LearnEnglish Teens

No, it's only used in the present tense. For the past you use had without got. I had a racing bicycle.

What about the question form?

Have you got everything you need? Have we got any red chilli peppers at home? Have you got a minute?

Hang on a minute, I've heard Do you have ... ? a lot too.

Yes, have got is more used in British English and have is more American. The question and negative form is different with have – you need to use the auxiliary do/does.

> I have two sisters. (American English) Do you have change for ten dollars? (American English) He doesn't have a clue about soccer. (American English)

You will hear British people use have as well as have got.

Anything else I should know?

In British English we use have got more in speaking and have more in writing - it's a little more formal.

OK, I've got it now!

Very clever! Yes, you can also use have got to mean 'understand'.

Watch the video on our website!

www.britishcouncil.org/learnenglishteens

© The British Council, 2012 The United Kingdom's international organisation for educational opportunities and cultural relations. We are registered in England as a charity.