- Daisy: Right, I think we're almost ready. I just hope everyone arrives soon so we can hide before Amy gets here.
- Ollie: What time did you tell people to come?
- Daisy: About now, and Amy half an hour later.
- Ollie: Mmm, but most of our friends arrive late and Amy's usually early.
- Daisy: It'll be OK, I told them to be on time. They'll all be here in a minute.
- Alfie: Oh, hi, Amy. I bet we're the first to arrive.
- Amy: Hello. First for what?
- Alfie: The party, of course. The surprise party.
- Amy: I came to revise a bit with Daisy. Nobody told me anything about a party!
- Alfie: They must have just forgotten. You can revise another day, can't you?
- Amy: Yes, but I haven't brought anything, and if I'd known, I would have worn something nicer.
- Alfie: I'll say my present is from both of us, and you look great, you always look great. Um, well, let's go in, shall we?
- Daisy: What are you doing here!?
- Alfie: We're here for the party of course. The surprise party.
- Daisy: Well, it's not a surprise any more, is it?
- Alfie: What do you mean?
- Ollie: It was a surprise party for Amy, you idiot.
- Amy and Alfie: Ohhhh.
- Alfie: Well, nobody told me. I thought it was for Sophie.
- Ollie: I did tell you. If you didn't play video games at the same time as you read your texts ...
- Alfie: I definitely would've remembered if you'd told me!
- Amy: Listen, it doesn't matter! I think it's really, really sweet of you to have a party for me. And I am surprised. I couldn't be more surprised!
- Daisy: Ah, good. Happy birthday for two days ago!
- Amy: Thanks a lot, Daisy, and Ollie. It's a lovely surprise!
- Daisy: It would've been even better if Alfie hadn't ruined it!
